HISTORIC HAWAI'I FOUNDATION
HONOLULU, HAWAI'I
1985
The purpose of Historic Hawai'i Foundation shall be: to preserve and encourage the preservation of historic buildings, objects, and sites relating to the history of Hawai'i;

to promote an awareness of and respect for all that is historically significant and architecturally distinctive about our State;

and through these efforts, to keep alive and intact for the enrichment of present and future generations the inherited beauty of the Hawaiian Islands and its unique historic role in the development of the Pacific Basin.

—Article II, By-Laws
Historic Hawai'i Foundation, founded in 1975, is Hawai'i's only statewide historic preservation action organization. A non-profit group of more than 2,000 individuals, corporations and organizations, Historic Hawai'i works actively to preserve and promote awareness of the historical and architectural heritage of the Islands through education programs, financial incentives, planning, legislation, and serving as a catalyst and resource for individual and community efforts.

Publication of Historic Hawai'i News began in September 1975 as a vital part of the Foundation's efforts to inform the public about Hawai'i's historic sites and preservation activities: those going on and those needed.

To accomplish this, Historic Hawai'i News became an outlet for quality research documenting many of our Islands' most precious cultural resources, linking the past with the present.

Countless volunteer hours went into preparing and verifying information, often by top professionals in their fields or by individuals with special ties to, and thus special knowledge of, a specific place. Some stories represent the culmination of years of patient research in collections across the state; others are condensations of book-length technical reports. Illustrations were secured from sources both public and private.

As a result, Historic Hawai'i News contains much information not easily found elsewhere, especially in concise form. This index was prepared to make this valuable information more readily available on a wider basis.

There are literally hundreds of people who deserve recognition for their advice and support over the newspaper's first decade of publication, especially former editors, dedicated members of the Publication Committee, and the talented writers and photographers whose contributions went into each issue.

The Foundation is grateful to archivist Linda Wiig for the excellent job she has done with this index, putting the first ten years of Historic Hawai'i News at our fingertips. Historic preservation is more than preserving buildings and sites for future generations; it is also passing on the knowledge of what those sites stand for.
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

It is a pleasure to give recognition to the people who assisted in various ways, from start to finish, in the publication of this index.

The idea of producing an index to Historic Hawai'i News was suggested by my cousin Howard Wiig, Chairman of the Foundation's Publication Committee. Phyllis G. Fox, the Foundation's President, recognized the potential utility of an index to the Foundation and to preservationists and researchers throughout the state, and readily sought to obtain the Board of Trustees' support for the project. I appreciate the Board's support and the direction and advice which Phyllis provided.

Special thanks are extended to Agnes Conrad, former State Archivist, who volunteered as project advisor and editor. Her name has probably appeared more frequently than any other person's in the acknowledgments sections of Hawaiian history books. She has been active with the Foundation since its founding and is the history advisor for the newspaper. It is a privilege to thank her not just for her willingness and ability to provide and to correct historical details, but also for her guidance, encouragement, and sense of humor.

Sharlene Rohter, co-editor for Historic Hawai'i News, served as final editor for the index and was responsible for seeing it through production. I greatly appreciate the many useful suggestions and the important corrections she supplied. The enthusiasm with which she approached a task which others would assuredly regard to be tedious was remarkable.

The editing of the diacritics used for Hawaiian words was volunteered by Robert Lokomaika'iokalani Snakenberg. The Foundation has appreciated and benefited from his language expertise since 1980 when he became the newspaper's Hawaiian language advisor.

Appreciation also goes to Barbara Vonnegut who volunteered her time when need arose as a consultant for word processing; to May Chau for assistance in entering the diacritics for Hawaiian words; to Raynette Kaiura for continued assistance as the Foundation's office manager; to Joe Palmer of Palmer Graphics for extra assistance relating to printing; and to Barbara Pope for designing the cover.

At its completion, I remain responsible for any errors or fault in entry or omission of information, in the selection and form of the headings, or in the design of the index.

It is hoped that this index, functioning both as a reference tool and as a record of past preservation work, will facilitate the future work of preserving what is worthy and good from Hawai'i's heritage.

Linda Wiig
NOTES TO THE INDEX USER

SCOPE

The scope of the newspaper, and likewise the index, covers preservation news and history relating to Hawai'i's historic houses, buildings, sites, and places.

Subjects relating to the architectural, economic, and legal aspects of preservation have also been indexed.

The names of persons indexed include persons who are historically related to a house, building, or site, such as architects and early home owners, as well as recipients of Historic Hawai'i Foundation awards. Groups and government agencies which are involved in preservation activities have been indexed. Artists are usually only listed under the heading ART. Authors of the newspaper articles have not been indexed.

Not all reports concerning placement of houses, buildings, or sites on the State or National Registers were indexed. Up-to-date placement information is available in the Hawai'i Register of Historic Places.

This index covers all issues of Historic Hawai'i News published during the first ten years of publication, September 1975 through December 1984. Except for the years 1975 (four issues) and 1982 (ten issues), the newspaper was published eleven times per year. Librarians might want to note that the numbering of the issues for 1976 and 1977 was irregular.

ENTRIES (Depth of indexing)

The entries lead the user to different quantities (three levels) of information, ranging from an extensive article of several pages length to a small piece of useful information as short as a sentence. This method of indexing, though not typical of newspaper indexing, was designed to meet the needs of the Historic Hawai'i Foundation staff and volunteers for whom the smallest mention of certain information is often valuable. It is hoped that this approach will also enable the index to be of some use even to persons who do not have access to the full ten years of back issues of the newspaper.

Preservation news is entered succinctly, and for articles which also contain significant historical information, a separate entry labeled "History" or "Brief history" is entered in addition to the news entry. Titles were not used as entries.

The three levels of indexing are:

1) ENTRIES FOR COMPREHENSIVE ARTICLES

An asterisk (*) marks articles (usually lengthy) which were felt to be of long-range research value both to preservationists and general researchers. For these articles, the authors' names (or Anon.) are provided in parentheses.

2) ENTRIES FOR OTHER ARTICLES

For short and/or less comprehensive articles, authors' names are not recorded.

3) ENTRIES FOR BRIEF REFERENCES

The presence of a column designator, e.g. "a," "b," etc. (referring to columns of print) or of the words "cap" (illustration caption) or "mentioned" usually indicates that the entry leads to a very short piece of information.
HEADINGS

Selected, or preferred, forms of names and subjects are printed in upper-case letters; non-selected forms are printed in lower-case letters and cross-referenced to their selected form.

"See" references lead the user from a non-selected form of the heading to the selected form.

"See also" references lead the user to narrower or related headings.

"See under" references lead from a non-selected narrow heading to a selected broader heading.

For buildings, preference was given to the name which appears on the building's facade; for houses, preference was usually given to the original owner's name. Commonly used variant names are sometimes included in brackets after the selected form.

Occasionally a building which was not considered important enough to have its own heading is entered only under its place name.

LOCATIONS

Names of buildings can be accessed by type, e.g. CHURCHES, COURTHOUSES, HOTELS, etc., but not by place. Maps, when listed under a place name, are useful in determining an area's buildings or sites.

A dagger is used in front of the location to indicate that a structure is no longer extant. If a structure has been moved from one location to another, it is indicated by "A TO B."

HAWAIIAN LANGUAGE USAGE

In accordance with the editorial policy for Historic Hawai'i News, diacritics have been used for all Hawaiian words. (See "Notes on Modern Usage of Hawaiian Language" on page vii.)

ILLUSTRATIONS

floor plan

The entries for "drawing" include renderings, engravings, diagrams, schematics, and blueprints. No indication of the date of an illustration has been provided in the index.

If a building, etc. was not considered important enough to be entered under its own heading, an illustration of that building may be entered under its place name. The entry would not necessarily give the name of the building but may read "photo (stores)," "photo (houses)," etc.
NOTES ON MODERN USAGE OF THE HAWAIIAN LANGUAGE

By Robert Lokomaika'iokalani Snakenberg
(Hawaiian Language Advisor, Historic Hawai'i News)

Readers will see many Hawaiian words used in Historic Hawai'i News. These few notes are to explain Hawaiian language usage being promoted and taught by the majority of professional Hawaiian language instructors in Hawai'i today.

Although it is an ingrained practice in many kama'aina today to pluralize Hawaiian words with the English "s" when they are using English, this is contrary to correct Hawaiian usage. Plurals in Hawaiian are denoted by markers or particles such as mau or nā but the form of the noun itself does not change between singular and plural. Therefore you should not see "hales," "heiaus" or "kuleanas" in Historic Hawai'i News or in this index except in this sentence!

Historic Hawai'i News has been using the 'okina or glottal stop (') consistently since 1980. 'Okina are inserted in proper names and quoted text if traditional pronunciation is known. We would also like to be using the kahako or macron (¯) indicating long vowel sounds, such as are used in this index, but our newspaper printer cannot accommodate that desire.

You might see the use of hyphens in the Pūku'i-Elbert Hawaiian Dictionary or Place Names of Hawai'i but these are used lexicographically to show the separate common word elements that make up a Hawaiian proper noun and should not be used in normal spelling.

Some Hawaiian proper nouns used for place names may be written separately such as Pu'u o Maui, whereas others might all be run together as in Haleakalā or Pu'upu'ueo. There is less standardization here and modern usage tends to depend on the original spellers of a place name since the sound to the ear is the same whether it is written as one word or several.

Words like ma 'uka and ma kai are spelled separating the two major elements, the preposition ma (toward) and the location words 'uka (upland) and kai (sea). This does not affect the traditional pronunciation of these words.

Since Hawaiian words are foreign to the English language context of Historic Hawai'i News, the words are generally italicized. This is the same editorial usage as with foreign words from any other language. Although words like aloha, lei and poi are now found in some English dictionaries and are frequently used by English language speakers, they are still Hawaiian words and we will italicize them.

Proper names are not used generally for their Hawaiian language meaning but rather to identify a specific person or place, and therefore they are not italicized.

This policy of italicization began with the May 1983 issue and was made possible at the production level by a switch to a typeface that contains both standard and italic characters in the same font.
