

How Do We Share Memorials, Sites and Monuments of Difficult Histories?

Virtual Event

A panel discussion exploring complicated histories

Join Historic Hawai'i Foundation as we explore policies, issues and current thinking around preserving and interpreting places where complicated and/or difficult historic events occurred. The panel will discuss the differences between “preserving” history and “glorifying” it, and what this means for our present and future.

Discussion and dialogue about these places may help build a community consensus on when and how to tell difficult stories and the role that tangible, physical preservation can and should play in collective memory, understanding and making amends.
